FOR OUR TEACHERS

Charles Coats

I had the privilege yesterday to speak at a teachers’ appreciation breakfast at the Empire Avenue church of Christ in Benton Harbor. Besides visiting with friends from the congregation there, it was a wonderful and inspiring time for me to be around those who had given their time to teach in the Bible Classes. Those involved in their Bible classes were from every age in life from the young adult to the older individuals. Some had taught for many years and others for less. Yet, regardless of how long they had taught, they all shared one belief – our children, teenagers, and adults need to hear the Biblical message. They willingly prepared themselves to give everything they could in guiding the lives of those in their classes. And for this, they deserve to be commended as Paul commended the Thessalonian brethren for their teaching of the word (1 Thess. 1:8,9).

As I thought about the event in Benton Harbor, I thought that we here have not really expressed our appreciation for our Bible class teachers as we ought. Those who teach spend many hours in study and preparation. They sacrifice their time so others may hear the message of God.

Lives are shaped by our Bible class teachers. They work to instill within the hearts of their students the knowledge of and love for God’s holy message. Our Bible class teachers see the value of souls and want to help others go to Heaven.

Teaching Bible classes can be extremely rewarding but can also be very discouraging. When students are not listening or the teacher has been teaching for a long time, it may seem like a worthless endeavor. But, please understand that the value of your work is giving the students the opportunity to obey the gospel and for that we are very thankful.

As you examine your role as a Bible class teacher try to remember that because of your efforts not only can you change the life of an individual student, but because of that student’s work for God, change the lives of countless numbers of other people.

Again, our thanks for all the work our Bible class teachers do. May you continue serve God in all things.
